

#GSTC2025 Global Sustainable Tourism Conference to be Held in Fiji

The 2025 Conference of the Global Sustainable Tourism Council (GSTC) will be held in Fiji from August 5-8, 2025. This landmark event will bring together global leaders in sustainable tourism, including government representatives, destination managers, industry professionals, and sustainability experts, to advance the future of responsible travel and tourism worldwide.

Fiji, known for its natural beauty and commitment to promoting sustainability and environmental conservation, provides an ideal host destination for #GSTC2025. With its sustainability initiatives, including conservation efforts and community-based tourism projects, Fiji offers an inspiring setting for this global gathering.

A Platform for Global Collaboration

The GSTC2025 Conference will feature an extensive program, including keynote speeches from influential sustainability leaders, interactive panel discussions, and hands-on workshops and trainings designed to foster best practices in tourism sustainability.

Attendees will have the opportunity to explore critical topics related to Marine & Coastal Tourism, Community, Culture and Responsible Development, and Destination Stewardship. Furthermore, #GSTC2025 will serve as a key networking platform, allowing stakeholders from across the tourism industry to collaborate and exchange ideas and innovative solutions for a more sustainable future.

"Tourism Fiji is delighted to bring GSTC to Fiji later this year, in a first for our region. As a developing country, our need for sustainability is immense. We recognize the precious environment that gives us our livelihood in tourism, and we want to preserve it. To do this, we need input, professional advice, learnings, and best practices - adapted to our pressing needs in a small developing island nation. We are delighted to host delegates from around the world to also experience the very best sustainable tourism experiences we have to offer," said Tourism Fiji CEO Brent Hill.

By hosting GSTC2025 in Fiji, the conference aims to highlight the Pacific region's unique sustainability challenges and opportunities, emphasizing the importance of climate resilience and conservation in island destinations worldwide.

GSTC invites tourism professionals, sustainability advocates, and industry stakeholders to join this one-in-a-kind event in 2025. More details on pre-conference trainings, venue, and speakers will be announced here soon. Early-bird Registration for the conference can be accessed here.
